About the Farm and Garden.

[Prepared for The Caledonian.]

Mutton Sheep.

Good mutton sheep have advanced nearly thirty per centum in price the past fortnight.

Shrinkage in Potatoes.

A Massachusetts farmer says he knows by experience that potatoes kept in cellar six months from October 1 shrink 12 per cent in weight.

Heavy Fleeces.

George N. Payne of Bridport, at a private shearing, clipped from forty ewes two years old 734½ pounds of wool, an average of eighteen pounds and nearly six ounces per head.

A Good Creed.

An English farmer remarked that he "fed his land before it was hungry, rested it before it was weary, and weeded it before it was foul." This is agricultural wisdom put in a small compass.

Sixteen Pounds a Week.

A scientific feeding man made sixteen pounds and one ounce of butter in a week from a Jersey cow belonging to Frederick Billings of Woodstock, at a cost of fourteen cents a pound. The cow had only her ordinary food and care.

Pure Bred Cattle in Colorado.

There has been an immense influx of pure bred cattle into the state of Colorado the past year. Many ranchmen who have depended on the scrub to make beef of are grading up their herds for better results.

More Sales of Stock.

Foster, Southam and Hurdall, had a combination sale of Hereford young things at Denver April 22d. The thoroughbreds averaged $315, and the grades $75.—The sixth annual sale of Jersey cattle held at New York closed April 24th; 306 animals were sold at an average of $295.—J. R. Rice & Son and F. P. Crane sold 18 Hereford bull calves at Denver, Colorado, April 23, averaging $330.65.

How To Test It.

The Scientific American gives the following as a simple and infallible test for oleomargarine: "Stir a little—half a teaspoonful or less—of the suspected butter in enough sulphuric ether to dissolve it. By the time the grease is dissolved the ether will have been evaporated and the residuum will show, to smell or taste, whether it is butter, lard or tallow. Five cents worth of ether will suffice for several tests."

Planting Evergreens.

Evergreens, say expert arboriculturists, should be transplanted late in May or first of June if the season is backward and the new shoots have not made much growth. The roots should be carefully protected from the sun and wind, as these seldom recover if once dried. A cloudy or showery day should be taken for handling evergreens, or, if this is not practicable, keep the roots constantly wet and rolled up in matting.

The Dorset Sheep.

There is a breed of sheep in the south of England called the Dorset, which has some valuable points. They take run in April, June, September, and the lambs are ready for market at Christmas. A large proportion of the ewes produce and raise twins and triplets. The ewes are ready for sale immediately after weaning and are thus able to produce two crops of lambs a year. Mr. Pittfield of Dorset, Eng., had 100 ewes that raised 353 lambs in one season.

Commercial Fertilizers.

When we see the books of testimonials in favor of the commercial fertilizers sold we wonder what sort of a book it would be that would hold the other side of the story if it was collected in that form. A farmer on Pudding Hill in Lyndon remarked the other day that last year he planted three-quarters of an acre of potatoes, using six hundred pounds of phosphate. When harvest came he had to sell all those potatoes, with a quarter of an acre beside to pay for the phosphate. He doesn't want to buy any now.

Large Barns Unprofitable.

If you have determined to build a big barn this year, stop and count the cost before you do it and try and calculate the earnings of the barn. The writer has a barn that cost some thousands to build, and it does not earn as much as a few comfortable sheds would that would have cost only a few hundreds. Banking and rough boards are cheap. The frame alone to my barn cost more than the entire farm building should cost. I do not believe there is a large barn in existence that affords pure air when decently filled with stock, while with cheap sheds pure air is the rule. With sheds you can afford the room to work into loose boxes, which adds greatly to the comfort and growth of the animals. Money invested in pure stock will earn you something from the increase, but a big barn is a constant source of expense with almost no returns. Still how many a farmer has mortgaged the farm to build a great barn to beat some neighbor, and never had a decent animal in it.

Custom Boots Cheapest in the End.

The practice our fathers had of taking their beef and veal hides to the tanner and then the leather to the shoe maker for the year's stock of boots and shoes for the family, may be taken up by us with profit and certainly with comfort. Feet wet by leakage in the leather boot, or by sweat in the rubber, are one of the inevitable facts of farm life now. To save from 25 to 75 cents on a pair of boots, we buy a ready-made article that is unfit for farm work and in the course of the year they cost much more than the custom-made boot. Three men on a farm in this county started out newly shod, one with a good pair of heavy custom-made boots that cost $3.50, the other two with the sale goods. When the good boots were yet in good condition one of the other men had spent $16 and the other $17, and both had wet feet nearly all the time. The general impression is that when the old practice died out, the honest tanners and shoemakers died too, but if we return to the practice, good workmen will be plenty in both lines.

"Spread Eagle" Beats "Big Ike." In coming from Suffolk course, Philadelphia, the other day, John Splan, the well known horse man, had a companion with him and was behind the trotter, Big Ike, to top wagon. They met on the road like Street driving his black pacer, Spread Eagle. Splan attempted to pull out and pass the pacer but Street did not care to be dusted and they had it nip and tuck up the road. When they reached Point Breeze course they agreed to drive in on the track and have it out. After getting on the course they squared away and went the mile, Spread Eagle finishing four lengths ahead with Street bare-headed. He lost his hat at the three quarter pole and Big Ike put his foot through it. The motion of the horse worked the hat up on his leg making it look like a patent knee boot as he came up the stretch. Splan was very sorry for the damage he had done the hat and to square matters he took a handsome pair of new quarter boots from Big Ike's big feet and presented them to Mr. Street—[Breeder's Gazette.]

Root Crops.

Every stockman and farmer should make a point of raising a good supply of the various kinds of roots, for stock-feeding. Mangels and sugar-beets are probably of most value. The sooner the ground can be prepared for them, the better, and a loose, friable soil is best. Plant in rows far enough distant to allow working with horse cultivator or plow. They will yield well in good soil without extra fertilizing; but they are great feeders, and if there is stable manure for the purpose, it may be used to advantage. Sow mangels early in May. They require deep culture. Long Red and Kimer's Globe are good varieties. Turnips are more valuable for feeding than commonly thought to be. Sow Ruta Bagas or Swedes from June 1st to July 1st. The White and Purple are good varieties, also American Ruta Baga and Yellow Aberdeen, the latter, a strap-leaf. When hay is worth fifteen dollars per ton, Ruta Bagas are worth five dollars a ton. Carrots should be sown in May. The Long Orange is a good variety. When harvested store in cellars or pits.—[Agricola] in Independent.

The World Coming.

Miss Maria A. West of Constantinople, says the Congressionalist, a writer of the commencement of a mission work in that city such as never has been known there before. It is really another testimony of Mr. Moody's labors in Great Britain. After his meeting in Glasgow, about 11 years ago, Rev. Dr. Somerville of that city was induced to leave his pastorate and give himself up to evangelistic work for the world. He is now considerably past 70, and has reached Constantinople after touring nearly around the globe. He is accompanied by his son, Rev. James Somerville, and a young aide, both of two and three meetings daily. One Sabbath service at Robert college, in which the sermon occupied two hours, awakened the most profound interest among the 150 or more present. Another gathering, for the Greek population, attracted an audience of 400 or 500. The fact that so many from these different villages came to the evening services, held in Pera, the European quarter, speaks well for their sustained interest. It is delightful, says Miss West, to see a venerable Scotch minister throwing himself, with all the enthusiasm of a young athlete, into modern methods, of the best type of evangelistic work. His picturesque style is particularly suited to the Oriental mind; the people call him the "artist" preacher.

"At The Last."

"Look not thou on the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last, it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." "At the last!" Verily, that is the word that means it. Then come with me and see the said, said sight, I think, I ever witnessed. The warden was leading me through one of the corridors of the workhouse on Blackwell's island, when, going to the door of a cell, he pushed back the sliding board from the grating and bade me look in. The room was lighted by a small window near the ceiling. All around, to the height of perhaps eight feet or more, it was lined with padding covered with leather, and on the floor, spread over its entire breadth, there was a mattress having a good appearance to the padding on the sides. On the mattress there lay a man, probably not more than five-and-twenty years of age, bareheaded, barefooted, stripped of coat and vest, and having his arms tightly bound behind his head with strong cords. He had dropped asleep for a moment or two, and was breathing heavily. "There!" said the warden, as he turned away, "that is the man who has been suffering from delirium tremens, and we have put him in there to keep him from injuring himself." Ah! thought I, he is somebody's son; and my heart bled as I looked upon his degradation. This is what it comes to "at the last!" Yet that, after all, is not the last; for the book before me says: "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven." O thou victor of whosever thou art, who art the victim of this appetite, will thou lay these things to heart? I know thou feelest thy slavery and hatest thy chains; but if thou wouldst be free, thyself, (by God's help,) must strike the blow. Rise, in the night of thy manhood, and by the supplicated help of God's Holy Spirit, snap asunder the bands wherewith thine enemy has bound thee. Remember Belshazzar, and ding away thy cup ere yet thou art overtaken by Belshazzar's doom!—[Rev. Wm. M. Taylor.]

The Grace Needed.

That was an apt reply given by Mr. Moody at the recent Milwaukee convention. A man, walking up to him, abruptly asked: "Mr. Moody, have you grace enough to be burned at the stake?" "No, sir." "Don't you wish you had?" "No, sir." "I don't need it. All I want is grace enough to live in Milwaukee three days and hold a convention." "My grace shall be sufficient for thee"—here is no promise of more grace than one requires for his daily life, and no man receives a superfluous amount. "As thy days so shall thy strength be."—[Christian at Work.]
